Ulster Violence Continues

30 Priests Appeal for Peace; IRA Unit Pledges to Fight On

Roman Catholic priests made appeals for peace at worship services today but the outlawed Irish Republican Army vowed to fight on against British rule.

The priests read a joint statement to congregations in some of the most troubled quarters of Belfast.

Aimed specifically "at those conducting the IRA campaign," the statement said: "As priests working in these areas, we know that people want to see an end to armed conflict."

The appeal, read out at mass, expressed the antagonism of the Catholics to internment without trial of IRA suspects and recog-nized their fears of Protestantinspired suppression.

Violence Rejected

But it said that this should not be mistaken for support of the IRA's campaign of violence in the province, where 298 persons have died in three years of violence. In weekend statements, the TRA's militant Provisional wing rejected growing demands for a halt in the terror while British peace initiatives are allowed time to work. Britain has taken over direct rule of Northern Ireland, suspending the Protestant-based provincial government for at least a year. The IRA Provisionals denounced Catholic politicians for "going round the doors asking for peace" and said that bombs would continue to go off until Ireland is united.

Political sources said the pact constituted the Soviet Union's But reported peace feelers hy political representatives of tha TRA Provisionals were also spurned by hardline Protestants. Belfast's biggest hotel was blasted by guerrilla bombers. Damage to the Europa Hotel was estimated at £100,000. About 30 to 50 pounds of gelig-nite was used in the bomb at the hotel, British experts said. Police said that a man and a girl hijacked a furniture truck and forced the driver and his helper to drive them to the Roman Catholic Springfield Road district. The two men were beld while the explosive was planted. The truck was then driven to the Europa. The couple gave hotel personnel 15 minutes' warning and then disappeared.

The President himself has not commented publicly on the Vietnam situation since the attacks began. Newsmen were summoned to his Key Biscayne residence yesterday morning to hear him praise two customs officers who seized $5 million worth of heroin of the Miami docks Friday, But the President, who looked tanned and chipper, did not mention Vietnam or invite questions. Asked to comment on North Victoamese invitations this week to reopen the Paris talks, Mr.

WASHINGTON, April 9 (NYT). -The Nixon administration has received word that North Vietnam has committed its last remaining "home division" to the invasion of South Vietnam. The report has reinforced the conviction of top government strategists here that Hanoi's "one last throw of the dice" in the war is meant to be the prelude to serious negotiations, possibly even before President Nixon leaves for Moscow late in May. The movement southward of Hanol's last available combat dlvision will leave the North defeuded by only two training divisions, officials said. They believe that such a total military commitment reflects a fear by the North Vietnamese that time may not be on their side and a determination to seize the hest available bargaining position for negotlating during the U.S. presidential campaign.

The momentum achieved by the invaders so far is no cause for despair, officials bere contend, because it was achieved against the relatively weak Third Division of the South Vietnamese Army with overwhelming artillery support from "sanctuary" areas in the Demilitarized Zone between the two Vietnams.

Major Fight Ahead

The best South Vietnamese units will be tested only in the coming battle to defend the coastal euclaves of Hue and Da Nang. It is said, and the outcome of that battle will determine the relative bargaining strength of the two

The enemy's challenges further south, in the Central Highlands and within a 100-mile radius of Saigon, are seen here as much less worrisome.

The surrender of the Ninth Brigade of the South Vietnamese Fifth Infantry Division—with the number of men not given-was said to have occurred Friday in Binh Long Province. The 56th Regiment was said to have surrendered in Quang Tri Province on April 2.

Heavy clouds curtailed bomb-ing over North Vietnam for the third successive day, but U.S. fighter-bombers were reported to have flown 360 air strikes in South Vietnam, with B-52s making 18 raids, mostly in Quang Tri and Kontum Provinces.

In Quang Tri, the North Vietnamese opened another phase of their major offensive after a luli in the fighting there since last Monday. U.S. officers said the North Vietnamese had been re-supplying and infiltrating large numbers of troops to the west around the front line at Dong

The latest action began with enemy tank and infantry assaults on the western edge of Dong Ha, on Quang Tri combat base just outside the city and on Firebase Pedro. 10 miles southwest of Quang Tri.

At Dong Ha, North Vietnamese Soviet-made T-54 and South Vietnamese U.S.-made M-48 tanks engaged in direct duels. American officers on the scena said, and nine enemy tanks were reportedly knocked out with two government tanks jost. Overcast skies prevented effective air support to the South Vletnamese. The North Vietnamese kept np a steady bombardment of the highway between Dong Ha and Quang Tri city with long-range artillery. Farther South, the North Vietnamese iaunched two waves of tank assaults on Pirebase Pedro. The first wave of 10 tanks was destroyed by rockets, U.S. offi-cers said, with four of the 10 tanks in the second wave also destroyed. The South Vietnamese command said that 1,000 North Vietnamese had been killed and 1,000 wounded in the battles around

Quang Tri U.S. officers reported that the battle performance by Saigon's troops showed great improvement over their reaction to the initial North Vietnamere offensive 11 days ago, when they fled by the thousands from the intensive North Vietnamese artillery bar-

The North Vietnamese are believed to have committed their entire reserve to the Quang Tri battle-between 30,000 and 40,000 men-but South Vietnamese officers and U.S. advisers are growing more confident that the government forces can hold the thrust at Quang Tri.

The enemy was also reported to be continuing its shelling and probing attacks against Firebase Bastogne in the mountains 20 miles west of Hue. The base,

Bomb Hoax in Paris In Radio-TV Strike

PARIS, April 9 (AP).-An anchymous phone call started a bomb alert in the headquarters of the state-owned radio and television network which idled by a strike today.

No bomb was found after a thorough search of the building. The strike, decided by radio and TV technicians and to be continued tomorrow.caused the cancellation of projected programs and their replacement by continuous music on the radio and only one film and one news show on the TV network which is considered a critical out-post, was said to be under firm

By contrast, the attacks to the west and north of Saigon in Binh Long and Tay Ninh Provinces appeared to be posing an increas-ing threat to the South Vietnamese government. A relief columo, consisting in part of paratroopers who ordinarily guard the presidential palace, failed to break through to the encircled Fifth Division at An Loc.

Reports from the scene said that the government troops made little attempt to mova forward or to clear the enemy from the jungle to the sides of the highjungle to the sides of the high-way. Advancing North Vietna-mese troops, meanwhile, moved 15 miles closer to Salgon, sur-rounding the city of Lai Khe in Binh Dong Province. South Vietnamese officers said they expected to begin a major counterattack up the highway as troops from the 21st Division arrived from the Mekong Delta. The shift of the 21st Division is believed to mark the first time that Salgon has moved a regular army division from one military region to another to use as reserves, and it opened a large area of the delta to possible enemy attack.

The decision to shift the 21st Division was viewed in Saigon as of the government's plight.

U. S. officers fear that the civilian and military casualties on all sides will exceed the 81.736 people killed in the Tet offensive. No estimates of casualties in the offensive have been made public.
Asked if the fighting poses such a grave threat that U.S. troop withdrawals will have to be slowed, Gen. Abrams replied: 'I don't think so. The offensive was bound to occur. We foresaw [North Victnam] was going to make a maximum effort."

Gen. Abrams added that there was no intention to commit any U.S. troops to the battle, although U. S. commanders have moved some troops around to protect installations near the fighting in the northern section of South Vietnam. Gen. Abrams was asked about the Vietnam war specter of de-atroying cities and villages to save them—thus derailing the

Malraux Sees End Of Historic Role Held by Vietnam

CANNES, France, April 9 (AP). "Everyone now knows that there will not be any Chinese attack in Vietnam, because of the extraordinarily fragile agreement between the United States and China. As a result, Viet-nam's historic character has come to an end."

This cosmic analysis came yesterday from André Malraux. The 70-year-old writer, whom President Nixon asked to counsel him before his trip to China, added "America's massive pres-ence in Vietnam was explained by the fear of the problem of Asiatic Communism. Today that problem no longer exists." Talking to reporters after his return from a Mediterranean cruise, Mr. Malraux said he was not interested in playing a goington and Hanoi. see an end to the bombing," he said "just as I hardly see a new Dien Bien Phu"

Mr. Malraux said he regards President Nixon's Moscow visit as "perhaps being decisive" for the future of Asia. Ha added without elaboration that "the real drama for Asia will begin the day Mao disappears."

Fulbright Says Vietnam Air War Is Re-Escalation

WASHINGTON, April 9 (Reuters).—Sen. J. Pulbright said to-night that the North Vietnamese offensive shows the emptiness of President Nixon'e Vietnamization program. Sen. Fulbright, D., Ark, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and a leading critic of the war, said in a television discussion that Mr. Nixon's response by increasing the bombing was a major U.S. re-escalation. He urged the government to negotiate an end to the war. He said he did not expect to see

U.S. ground forces ordered back to Vietnam, at least until the presidential election in November. cause such a move would be so unpopular.
The current offensive proves

"there is no answer except to end the war," he declared. Sen. Fullright suggested that the North Vielnamese assault may have been a reaction to Mr. Nixon's decision to disclose secret peace negotiations with the Communists and to break off the public peace talks. He said Hanoi had made clear it would not settle for Americans remaining. anywhere in Vietnam.

2 Held in Spain For Shipyard Clash

EL FERROL Spain, April 9 (UPI) .- Two teachers, husband and wife, have been arrested in connection with the March 10 clash between police and 3.000 shipyard employees from he state owned Bazzn Works, local press reports said today --

They were indentified as Julio Perez de la Fuente and his wife Maria Charges were not specified. The arrests came as the government banned the April edition of the monthly magazine Cuadernos Para el Dialogo (notes for dialogue). No reason for the han was given, but sources said the issue contained an article on the El Ferrol disorders, in which two workers were fatally shot and 50 persons hurt.

"You are not the master of what you do in battle. What you do has to fit in some way with what the other sides does. In the end if the North Vietnamese bad stayed on their side of the DMZ all this horror and bloodletting - would not have happened. U.S. Officials Expect Talks

(Continued from Page 1) have considered negotiating of that basis last summer and fall during Henry A. Kissinger, secret contacts with them in Paris, but they drew back, the Americans think, because they believed that the Thieu govern ment did not have enough strength to withstand a final atout military assault. Such an assault at this tim has been repeatedly predicted in Mr. Kissinger and other officials who refused to close the door on the prospect for negotiations. Their theory was that Hangi would deem President Nixon to be more conciliatory at the bargaining table during his ekr. tion campaign, just as they be lieved former President Lynds B. Johnson to be most susceptive to a bargain during the election year of 1968. One More Campaign And to enhance their position in such talks, it was predicted the North Vietnamese would attempt one more major militare campaign to weaken the This government, its standing among the South Vietnamese and its

If Hanoi were interested only in military gains, this theory holds, it would have waited six more months or a year, until even fewer Americans were on hand to help resist their assault, Officials here are now recalling these predictions because they wish to stiffen Salgon resistance at a crucial juncture and to avoid a demoralizing debate in the United States. But they also wish the Hanoi government to understand that the path to the negotiating table remains open. If Hue and Da Nang were to fall to the advancing North Vietnamese troops, Lit. is conceded, the balance of bargaining power would be seriously alterd. But whether the South Vet-namese stand or fall, negotiations are held to be the most likely result. Mr. Thieu is being told that his prospects in the expected talks depend on his military defenses in the next month and he has been told not to count on any U.S. ground reinforce ments for the battle.

United States but at its narrow. junction with Lake Huron contributes much of the lake system's flow, which starts at Lake Superior on the west and passes through the St. Lawrence River into the Atlantic Ocean.

Superior, covering 31,810 square miles, is the world's largest lake in ares, although its water volume of about 3,000 cubic miles is less than that of the Soviet Union's Lake Balkal which also is plagued with polintion.

All the Great Lakes have pollution problems except Huron, whose basin is sparsely populated and which gets most of its flow from relatively clean Lake Superior.

But portions of Superiors shoreline are becoming increas-ingly contaminated by sewage. Lake Michigan is fouled by sew-age from innumerable communities and discharges of the Chicago industrial complex.

Lake Erie is a virtual sump for the sewage created by more than 12 million people, mostly on the U.S. side, and for industrial discharges from such centers as Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo. Lake Ontario, at the end of the line, inherits the cumulative con-tamination of the other lakes. Canada and the United States reached agreement in principle last June on a four-year joint program for improving the lakes. It calls for construction of municipal and industrial waste treatment facilities, reduction of phosphate discharges and establishment of controls on thermal pollution, radioactive wastes, pesticide residues and storm-water

The U.S. part of the program projects expenditures of about $2 billion, half of it to come from the federal government and half from state and local sources. The Canadian portion was indefinitely estimated as several bundred mil-lion dollars. This is the agreement Mr. Nixon is expected to $250,000 Plot On Airline Laid To Two in Calif.

WASHINGTON, April 9 (Reuters)—A man and a woman have been arrested on charges of conspiracy to extort $250,000 from United Air Lines by threatening to place bombs on their planes, according to acting Attorney General Richard Kleindienst.

FBI Director J. Edger Hoover said that Allton Fain, 47, and Judith Wickstrom, 27, also known as Judith Fain, were arrested Friday by FBI agents in Hayward, Calif., where they live. He said the investigation began March 7 when luggage containing explosive material was found in Seattle, where it had been flown aboard Francisco. Later, a man called United and demanded $250,000, saying that otherwise more bombs would be placed on United aircraft.

On April 7, the extortionist instructed United to take a package containing $250,000 to a telephone box in San Lorenzo, Calif. Subsequent phone calls indicated that the package should be left in a specific place in Hayward.

FBI agents took Miss Wickstrom into custody as she attempted to pick up the package, and seized Mr. Fain later.

But. in a question-and-answer session following a blistering attack on President Nixon's economic policies at the National Press Club, Mr. Meany acknowledged that "if by chance the Democrats should unite, which is a long shot, they might be able to do something."

Mr. Meany carefully sidestepped any indication of a preference among Democratic candidates, except to reject Alabama's Gov. George Wallace as a "racist" and "demagogue" that "frankly, I wouldn't touch with a fork."

Prognosis Is Favorable

Cardiologist Says Johnson Suffered Major Heart Attack

By Ken Ringle

CHARLOTTES VILLE, Va., April 9 (WP) .- The chief cardiologist treating former President Lyndon Baines Johnson said this weekend that the chest pains Mr. Johnson suffered on Friday morning resulted from a major heart attack comparable in size to the one he suffered in 1955.

But Dr. John Willis Hurst, an Emory University heart specialist who came to the hospital from Atlanta; said that the former chief executive is responding much better to treatment this time and said that the prognosis for his recovery is favorable. Dr. Hurst said today he is returning to his home in Atlanta, indicating the former chief executive's condition has greatly "We feel reasonably good about it," Dr. Hurst told a crowded press conference at the University of Virginia Medical Center. "I would think his chances are about eight in 10."

The doctor would not predict bow long Mr. Johnson would remain in the hospital here. It would be more than several days, he said, but probably less than several weeks. Dr. Hurst's statement was the first official word from doctors here on the cause and severity of the illness which struck the 63year-old former President. Mr. Johnson and his wife, Lady

Bird, had arrived in Charlottesville only the day before for a brief visit with their daughter, Lynda Bird, and her husband, Charles Robb, a second-year student at the University of Virginia Law School.

Hospital spokesmen had declined treviously to describe the chest pains as a heart attack, pending the outcome of various tests. Their sparse medical bulletins were confined to reports that Mr. Johnson was "resting con:fortably" with his "condition

Opposition's Capital March

Can't Pass Through Center of Santiago

By Juan de Onis

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 9 (NYT).—Chile's leftist govern-ment has banned a scheduled march through the center of this capital by the anti-Marxist opposition parties on the eve of a major international conference

The order, which was approved yesterday by President Salvador Allende set a route for the "march for democracy" Wednesday that is more than a mile away from the headquarters building of the third United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, which opens here Thursday with delegates from more than 130 countries.

Leaders of the Christian Democratic National and Democratic Radical parties, which have called for a march by 300,000 people, protested the order.

They said it was discriminatory because the government had recently allowed the Communist Youth Movement and the small United Popular Action Movement, one of the government's eight parties, to march through central city streets.

The opposition march, timed to take place as international personalities gather here, wes clearly designed to impress world opinion with the extent of oppo-sition to Mr. Allende's regime, which has lost the last three congressional by-elections held

The confrontation between Mr. Allende, whose coalition includes the Communist and Socialist parties, and the congress, which is controlled by the anti-Marxist opposition, is a reality which the foreign delegates will observe during the five-week conference.

Last Thursday, Mr. Allende vetoed key portions of a constltutional reform restricting the powers of the executive to extend state ownership over a large sector of industry and commerce that remains under private ownership.

The opposition has declared it will seek to override the vetoes,

Allende Bans Police Sift N.Y. Underworld For Clues to Gallo's Assassin

NEW YORK, April 9 (NYT).— Scores of detectives questioned known gangsters and fanned out across New York City yesterday in a search for clues to the identity and motive of the man who shot and killed Joseph Gallo, a flamboyant underworld figure, in a restaurant in Manhattan's Little Italy section early Friday. No break in the case appeared imminent despite an abundance of leads, including statements by more than a dozen witnesses to the murder, ballistics reports on the fatal hullets and a dossier on the victim that contains information on every person he is known to have come in contact with in the past decade.

Gallo, known in and out of underworld circles as Crazy Joey, was slain during a celebration of bis 42d birthday by an assassin who invaded Umberto's clam house and shot him three times from behind.

After an autopsy yesterday, Gallo's body was taken to the Guido funeral home in his South Brooklyn neighborhood. Family and friends viewed the body in the afternoon. A service and burial were scheduled for tomor-

Colombo Gang's Bole

Persons questioned about the murder include known associates Gallo and of Joseph A. Colombo sr., who was critically wounded in an assassination at tempt last June 23 and whose underworld family has been feuding with Gallo's clan for

Also questioned were two employees and several patrons in the restaurant at the time of the shooting, and those in Gallo's party-his wife of three weeks Sina; her daughter by a previou marriage, Lisa Essary, 10; Gallo's bodyguard, Peter (The Greek) Diapoulas, 42; Diapoulas's date, Edith Russo, and Gallo's sister, Mrs. Carmella Piorello. Diapoulas, who was wounded in the left hip in an exchange at least 20 shots, was reported in fair condition yesterday. He was charged with illegal possession of a .32-caliber pistol.

The witnesses described the killer as a middle-aged man about 5 feet 8 inches tall with black, receding bair. He wore a light tweed coat, they said.

The police said the killer fled by car after the wild guu battle spilled out into the narrow streets of Little Italy.

"This is a gangland operation." said Chief of Detectives Albert Seedman. He said he had learn-ed that Gallo planned to reactivate a civil-rights group called Americans of Italian Descent, which could have rivaled the Italian-American Civil Rights League founded by Colombo.

Other theories included the possibilities that Gallo was killed in reprisal for the Colombo shooting, or for the murder

Mrs. Joe Gallo leaving a police station in New York.

Thursday of two other under-world figures in the city; that he was slain by a member of his own gang or by a "free-lance nut who wanted to make a big name for himself," as Robert Daley, the Police Department's deputy commissioner for public affairs, put it.

The intra-moh enmity against Gallo goes back to a gang war in the early 1960s that started when Joseph Gallo and his brothers, Larry and Albert, began to oppose the boss of their Mafia "family," Joseph Profaci, saying their group was not getting a fair share of he profits. A dozen persons were slain in the war.

Joseph Gallo was sent to prison in 1961 for extortion. In 1962, Profaci died of natural causes but the war continued under his brother-in-law and successor as

McCarthy Bows Out: Won't Push California Race

WASHINGTON, April 9 (NYT). Eugene J. McCarthy has decided not to campaign seriously for the California primary in June, in effect removing himself from significant contention for the Democratic nomination.

He had hoped to build himself into a viable candidate for the nomination or to assemble a large enough political following in selected primaries to justify forming a new political party if the Democrats did not adopt a candidate and a platform to his desires at the Miami convention. But the victory of Sen. George McGovern in the Wisconsin primary last week has meant that the South Dakota senator will be going on to California and that he and Mr. McCarthy would be contending for the same group of liberal and protest voters there. Splitting this vote between them could throw Cali-fornia, with its 271 delegates in a winner-take-all primary, to Sen. Muskie or to Sen. Hubert Humphrey, who represent tha more traditional forces in the

Mr. McCarthy said, however, that he would have his name on the ballot in California, since his supporters have obtained the required 25,000 signatures on peti-tions, for the possibility that unforeseeable events may change the primary line-up there.

Muskie Attacks Move to Rename Cape Kennedy

WASHINGTON April 9 (WP) -Edmund Muskie, D., Maine, has moved to block Senate action on a bill changing the name of Florida's Cape Kennedy back to Cape Canaveral. Sen. Muskie charged that the proposal might be viewed as a slap in the face to the family of the late President John P. Kennedy.

In a letter to the Senate Democratic Policy Committee, Sen. Muskie demanded that before the bill is passed, the Senate be required to take a roll-call vote on it so that the position of every member can be publicly known. Sponsors of the bill—Florida's two senators, Lawton Chiles, a Democrat, Edward Gurney, a Re-publican—reportedly had been seeking its passage by voice vote.

The Policy Committee, of which Sen. Muskle is a member, agreed that the measure should be subjected to a roll-call vote. It will be up to the committee to determine when-if ever-the bill will be brought to the Senate floor for a vote.

A Muskie aide said that the senator would speak and vote against the bill if it ever reached the floor and that his position had received wide sympathy within the committee.

Virginia Ex-Gov. Battle, 81, Improved Education in State

April 9 (UPI).—Former Gov. John S. Battle, 81, of Virginia, who led Southern Democrats in a successful fight against a loyalty pledge at the party's national convention in 1952, died early

Mr. Battle, best known in Virginia for his educational program, was governor from 1950 until 1954 after 20 years in the General Assembly.

He practiced law in Charlottesvilla after leaving office and retired several years ago. He also served on the U.S. Civil Rights Commission from 1967 to 1969.

Mr. Battle gained national prominence in 1952 when, at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, he attacked a loyalty pledge which liberal party members favored and Soutbern Democrats opposed. Mr. Battle said Virginians would not promise to support nominees and policies hefore they were known, and his speech was credited with swinging the convention in favor of the Southern position. He did support the Democratic nominee for President, Adlai E. Stevenson. Four-Way Primary

Mr. Battle was elected governor with the endorsement of the late Sen. Harry F. Though the racial storm over the U.S. Supreme Court's decision on school desegregation did not occur until after his term, he had said as governor that it was "inevitable that properly qualified Negroes be admitted to . . . our institutions of higher learning" in the interest of equal education. Despite pro-civil rights tlatforms that caused Mr. Byrd and some of his followers to abandon the national Democratic ticket, Mr. Battle stuck by tha party in 1952 and 1956. A Baptist minister's son, Mr.

Battle was born in New Bern, N.C. His family moved to Petersburg. Va., when he was young and he was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Virginia and its law school.

last May to pay tribute to Mr. Byrnes on his 90th hirthday. "Never in American history has one man held more high offices with more distinction than has Gov. Byrnes," the President said. Slim, elegant, a grecious compromiser, Mr. Byrnes was a Senate man as the term is understood in the South. He rarely spoke on the floor. But in the cloak-room and in his office over bourbon and branch water, he wheedled and bargained with a flair that another senator from Texas was later to make famcus.

In his first House term, he noticed that 23 other congressmen also had hills to build federal roads in their districts. So he quietly brought them together and formed a caucus that led to the creation of a new House committee.

Mr. Byrnes worked hard at the Senate's business, so the new Democratic President, the former assistant secretary of the Navy, turned to him to round up the votes.

By 1937, he was turning against President Roosevelt. He didn't like the court-packing bill; he wanted to outlaw strdown strikes: he couldn't see why the federal government should put a floor under wages and a ceiling over hours.

Back in Line With war in Europe, he was back on the reservation. He was pushing the money hills to rearm, lifting the ban against the sale of weapons to belligerents, helping sell weapons to allies on long credit terms.

President Roosevelt gave him a seat on the Supreme Court in 1941, but that was too quiet a life for an activist politician, even one who still counseled the President from his chambers. A year later, Roosevelt took him off the Court and put him in charge of holding the dike against wartime inflation. First he was director of economic stabilization. but there were too many other agencies with a finger in the economic pie. 4 Assassins Die After Killing Zanzibar's Leader Karume

April 9 (Reuters).—Two assassins of Zanzibar leader Sheikh Abeid Karume were shot and killed by security forces today, and a third killed himself before he could be caught, Zanzibar radio report- :

By Jim Hoagland ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, April (WP),-Sheikh Karıme's autocratic and controversial rule over the beantiful Indian Ocean island of Zanzibar has ended as it hegan eight years ago—swiftly, shrouded in uncertainty and stained by violence.

The assassination of Sheikh Karume may produce a protracted power struzgle within the Revolutionary Council that rules Zanzibar with its own version of radical African socialism.

The killing follows recent reports of deep discontent within the 3,000-man Zanzibari Army over food shortage and lack of pay increases for officers. In February Sheikh Karume ousted the two farthest-left members of the Revolutionary Council.

Karume always has come from his right, from those who have been hurt ecocomically by his radical policies on the island, which is the world's largest supplier of cloves.

There is no clear successor to Shelkh Karume, who was president of the council. The results of any power struggle would unclear for some time, since little is known about the 13 or so other members of the council, who remained in Shelkh Karume's shadow while he transformed the bloody 1964 African revolution against an Arab oll-garchy into one-man rule that alternated between populism and

Exit Visa Refused

Mr. Trepper, a 68-year-old Jew, has had his requests for an exit visa from Poland turned down three times in the last two years, apparently because his absence from Poland is regarded by the authorities as a security risk.

Mr. Trepper said his wife had met their eldest son, Michael, a university lecturer in Copenhagen, today after traveling overnight by train from Warsaw.

The two other sons will be joining them in Copenhagen in two or three days. They are Edward 36, a lecturer at Hebrew University, Jerusalem, and Peter, 27, who lives in Canada.

The younger sons have started a campaign in the West to gain permission for their father to leave Poland. The family went there in 1957 after Mr. Trepper had spent 10 years in a Soviet prison after the war.

Mr. Peron, who was president of Argentina from 1946 until his overthrow in September, 1955. They included a charge of statutory rape stemming from Mr. Peron's alleged affair with a 14-year-old girl. Nelly Rivas, and a charge of misappropriation of government funds. The "betrayal of the nation" allegation was the only one still in effect.

The Argeotine government has also announced that Mr. Peron's passport, invalidated after his flight abroad, has been reissued and is available at the Argentine consulate in Madrid if he wants to pick it up.

Crisis Point—Again

end of that other. World War II, more than a quarter of a century ago) has come to resemble less the terrible, swift sword of traditional conflict than some kind of wasting disease. It is a hemophilia, for which the clotting factor has been sought in vain. Only rarely is some crisis point precipitated -a Dien Blen Phu, a Tet offensive, and now this latest series of assaults all along the narrow length of South Vletnam.

There have been other, chiefly peripheral, erises, to be sure-in Laos and Cambodia. But at the heart of the battle, in Vietnam itself, Dien Bien Phu was a clear-cut victory that seemed to bring the conflict to an end; Tet, of 1963, was a defeat that promised the same goal. Yet the departure of the French after Dien Bien Phu hrooght in the Americans, and the Tet attack, however great the shock to American opinion, however profound the psychological and political effect in the United States, was so slow in making its impact felt upon the actual situation in South Vietnam, that the North has launched another, greater offensive.

It is ohvious enough that if Gen. Giap's North Vietnamese and Viet Cong can smash the Thieu regime by force, despite American air power and the remaining American troops on the ground, it will be a more glittering victory than could be won after all

The long, long war in Vietnam, spluttering the Americans leave. It might well bring and flaring, but never ending (since the down President Nixon, as Tet brought down President Johnson. Even a partial victory -a substantial acquisition of territory, a hard blow to Sonth Vietnamese military and civilian morale-might place Hanoi in a better position to dictate conditions in Paris or wherever, and harden the American determination to get oot on any terms.

But there are other possibilities. Warfare on the scale the North Vietnamese are waging it not only makes the tattered pretense of Hanoi'e non-involvement an open scandal. It also makes their forces more vulnerable in case of a Tet-style defeat. And there are signs that the South Vietnamese people are reacting with wrath to what they regard as an invasion, rather than just a continuation of familiar civil war.

The risks to both sides, and to all concerned, however remotely, in the fighting, have heen multiplied by the new offensive. The issue is still very uncertain-all that can he said with any accuracy now is that many men, women and children are dying. villages are heing emptied by fire or flight and the woes of an unhappy land are being compounded. The desire for American disentanglement is, doubtless, growing; the difficulties of doing so are keeping pace. Some day the outcome, whatever that may be, will perhaps be hymned by Vietnamese children. But there are too many voices being stilled now forever.

Sound Start in Ulster

In launching his drive to bring peace to Nortbern Ireland, British Minister William Whitelaw has taken the step most likely to gain him the essential support of the Catholic and nationalist minority. It took courage to release 73 suspected terrorists; bot it was a dramatic demonstration of Britain's good faith in promising to phase out the policy of arhitrary internment.

Mr. Whitelaw also acted to remove a hated symbol of that policy hy scheduling an end to the use of the ship Maidstone as a floating prison in Belfast Harbor, where internees have been carrying out a hunger strike. Gerard Fitt, leader of the Social Democratic and Labor party, which speaks for moderate Catholics, has hailed these British moves and demanded an immediate end to the terrorist campaign of the Irish Republican Army Provisional wing.

As Mr. Fitt recognized, it will not be easy for Catholics who now desire only to cooperate for peace to detach themselves from the IRA. This was vividly demonstrated when a group of women who had assembled in Belfast to demand a truce from the IRA were driven out of a Catholic church hall by IRA sympathizers before they could begin their meeting.

The IRA is clearly losing support in both Belfast and Londonderry, however, and its leaders in Ulster-unlike those shouting defiance from the sanctuary of Doblin-are obviously uncertain about strategy. The Londonderry Provisionals have reportedly offered to meet Catholic leaders to discuss "what is best for the people" of that city.

In a hopeful development within Unionist-Protestant ranks, former Prime Minister Brian Faulkner has moved away from his hasty embrace of William Craig and now promises "a constructive contribution" to Mr. Whitelaw's efforts. Mr. Faulkner's call for cooperation, despite his lingering bitterness over the suspension of the Stormont government, should be of tremendous help in containing the Protestant backlash.

Mr. Craig's Ulster Vanguard may threaten reprisals and even secession; but with Mr. Faulkner and the Rev. Ian Palsley now calling for an end to violence it is improbable that anything like a majority of Protestants will answer the call to extremism. Despite the persistence of sporadic violence that claims more lives, Mr. Whitelaw is off to a better start on the long road to peace in Ulster than seemed possible two weeks ago. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The Baseball Strike

season has as yet to open because of a players' strike. The season is much too long in the first place-162 games for each team. There is harely enough talent available to stock 12 teams. To spread out this thinness ever thinner by having 24 teams is to insult the public. Or worse, hore it. So it is not entirely surprising that at this early stage, much of the public isn't even noticing the absence of baseball. For one thing, the basketball playoffs are beginning and, for another, the Masters golf tournament in Augusta (though hlack players are still kept out) has the eye of the sports world. Shirley Povich had it exactly over the plate when he noted the other day that "the nation would not keel over in a dead faint if there were no big league basehali for a while."

At issue in the players' strike is a demand for more money from the owners each year for a pension fund. An increase of $850,000 is asked, with management offering $400,000. The owners, long accustomed to the notion that athletes should use their muscles and not their heads, bave refused to hodge. Instead, their message was: Get back to your dugouts. Owner Bob Short, as tactless as ever, called the players' lawyer, Marvin

It is no great tragedy that the baseball Miller, an "idiot." As for the athletes, they seem to be like the batter who has done well to belt a double beyond the outfield but then riskily dashes on to third base trying for a triple. Non-metaphorically, the players are doing well right now with the pension fund they have, one already generous and broad by any standards. To the players' credit, at least they have said they would accept outside arbitration, a notion the owners reject.

Often in athletic disputes, it is the fan who loses hot in this one the owners and players are getting hurt also. The average player-earning $22,500 a year-is losing about $140 a game in salary, with the high paid swingers losing more. The owners stand to lose $2.5 million if the strike goes through the weekend. But something else is lost, which may never he recovered: public enthusiasm for the sport. There is not that much left anyway-with sports like golf, tennis, haskethall and football crowding in -hut in pursuing their own Interests, neither owners nor players seem to care about public enthusiasm. Apparently, they haven't heard the adage, even more apt now: Be foolish in a strike and you sometimes strike out, THE WASHINGTON POST.

International Opinion

Hussein's Peace Plan

At the very lowest level, any attempt to break the Middle Eas logiam is better than none. But the king's proposals are more immediately realistic in their recognition that the Arahs cannot simply stand pat forever on the positions they adopted in the immediate aftermath of the 1967 war.

President Sadat, who before now has shown courage and realism over the approach to a settlement with Israel, would do better, instead of seeking by demagogy to redeem his credit with the Palestinians, to recognize that Hussein and his plan need encouragement, not ostracism. By the same token it is in Israel's real long-term interests not to reject this small opening but to try to follow it up with great-power contacts. -From the Sunday Times (London).

Removing an Old Blemish

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—Quiet negotiations between the United States and Panama have now advanced to the point where it is hoped a new agreement governing the famous Atlantic-Pacific Canal—and possibly even the right to construct another interoceanic channel-can be resched before the end of this year. Intermittent negotiations then ran into impasses despite Washington's indication that it was prepared to cede substantial territory from the zone and accept new legal jurisdictional rules in what remained plus additional commercial concessions. The United States, however, wishes to insure its right to defend and operate the existing canal and to decide whether this should be enlarged or a new sea-level cut should be excavated.

To erase the "colonialist" image which has been attached to the United States, there has been agreement in principle to elide from any future treaty a phrase giving the United States the right to behave in the zone in a sovereign manner for a period defined as "in perpetuity." Not exactly. It is delinquent. The FHA should have known the furnace did not work and the roof was falling in, and very probably did know it, as the grand juries are ascertain-ing. Meanwhile, if you want a cheap house and don't mindabout things like heat, roofs or staircases, call George Romney. He has 244,000 of them. Now here is a comment on the situation from The New York Times's John Herbers, "It has become more and more evident in recent months that housing subsidy laws enacted in the 1960s in the name of helping the poor were in fact designed to enrich the lenders, the builders, the real-estate dealers and other interests," No. Mr. Herbers, the laws were not designed to enrichthe lenders, the builders the real-estate dealers—they ended up helping the lenders, the builders are: and the real-estate dealers. Peo at m. ple bave been observing this h a revelation, for approximately we have years.

Prof. Milion Friedman will give. you a speech on the subject of any duration, any time. About how Social Security ends w helping the better off, rather than the worse off; minimum wages that handicap, rather than belp the poor; about the farm subsidies, which inure mostly to the benefit of the richer farmers; about medical benefits, which increased medical costs about 100 percent, without increasing the number of doctors or nurses: about educational beaefits, which have diminished the quality of education: and now the various public housing programs, which play into the hands of the lenders, the builders, the realestate dealers.

Help or Hurt

Prof. Priedman believes it is a myth that the government can substantially help the cities, but that it is historical fact that the government has substantially hurt the cities.

He points out not only that under John V. Lindsay in New York services are worse and the cost of them has doubled. That isn't all there is to it—the higher tax, and the lowered benefits. The higher the tax, the less that is made available to the individual to spend in his own way. So that not only is a hunk of money being spent improvidently by the city, it is being wrested away from those who, if they had it to spend for themselves, would damn well see to it that the furnaces work, and the roof didn't leak.

Even so, as the information piles on, there are those who want the government to increase its functions rather than diminish them. It is government greed, every hit as much as human greed, that brings home the consequences of corruption.

U.S. Farmers

Several glaring inaccuracies in the lead editorial (IHT, March 31) on "Farmers and the Assembly Line" not only call into question the thesis of the editorial but also render a disservice finished in this country. What to the public by giving a false image of American agriculture. Contrary to the impression given in the editorial, family farms are vastly in the majority, and they produce the great bulk of our farm products. The units that are either large-scale, or factory-type, or corporate in legal form, or integrated in their structure are relatively few in number and produce the minority of our food, feed and fiber. They are generally highly specialized, concentrated in relatively few commodities, and found chiefly in few regions.

For example, less than 1 percent of American farms are incorporated. They operate about percent of the land in farms and produce about 8 percent of the output. And most of these are family corporations, indistinguishable from family farms in all attributes except their legal status

With this preponderance of family farms the United States is supplied with food with an expenditure of something less than 17 percent of personal in-

The editorial inaccurately states that farmers can adjust output more easily than manufacturers. The fact is that farmers are much less able to adjust output than are manufacturers precisely because the bulk of the output is by individual family farms. Moreover, the costs of production are fixed to a large extent in the form of land, family labor, livestock and machinery. A family farm thus cannot cut production costs with reduced output as can a factory which reduces hours of employment. Therefore, a family farm's only recourse for maintenance of income is maximum production-

The 16 black-governed countries have perhaps a million non-African residents, most of them Europeans (a term used here to ide white Americans). Even under colonial ad-ministration there was never a government of white settlers or settlers' descendants who thought of this land as home, the way Prime Minister Ian Smith and his supporters regard Rhodesia. East Africa, on the other hand, began attracting a flood of white settlers a hundred years ago, when the opening of the Suez Canal made travel convenient. Whites are still prominent in such former British colonies as Kenya and Zambia, and no less a: nationalist than Tanzania'a President Julius K. Nyerere has white advisers near the bighest level, which would be quite un-usual in the English-speaking parts of West Africa. The French-speaking state a follow a third course: France is still actively supporting several of them and making the major decisions in most of the rest. Frenchmen are everywhere in evidence in these states, even in government offices.

"The French have paid the piper and make damn sure he keeps playing their tune," explained Richard West, a British journalist who has written a book on Africa's whites. Social changes have accom-panied the political and economic transformation of the independent countries. In both the English-speaking and French-speak-ing parts of black Africa the number of white-women married to blacks has been increasing. Such marriages far outnumber those of white men and black women, perhaps because men are more likely to take their wives to their home countries or because African society is such that it is more difficult for women to meet foreigners: In a country like Nigeria, where there is relatively little racial feeling, mixed couples can have friends from any group. But even here tribal traditions and family pressures sometimes force a man who has a white wife to take a black wife as well-and the second marriage can be tha undoing

What is the white man's future in black Africa? The black man might reply: "It depends on you."

Attack Regarded as an Invasion

Hanoi's Drive Arouses Patriotism in the South

By Fox Butterfield

DONG HA, South Vietnam (NYT).—North Vietnam's attack on Quang Tri Province with tens of thousands of infantrymen appears to be angering many people in this devastated region and stirring feelings of patriotism among them.

The South Victnamese, 100,000 of whom have fled their homes, are angry because they believe that the attacks constitute an outright invasion, not a part of the long conflict between South Vietnamese for control of the country.

"Why do they send these hoys to attack us?" asked a farmer as he looked at the bodies of eight North Vietnamese soldiers who had tried to cut across a highway running through his village, five miles south of Quang The dead North Vietnamese.

Officials Puzzled U.S. officials here, who have tried unsuccessfully for years to create a sense of South Vietnamese nationhood, say they are astonished at such resistance but they hope it is a sign of unity against the North Vietnamese. By contrast, many of the Communist attacks during the Tet offensive of 1968 were carried out hy local Vlet Cong-South Viet-namese-who were easily able to infiltrate into the cities and around government troops. The Regional and Popular Forces were largely ineffective then, and the South Vietnam. Last week, however, all the enemy's main attacks were launched by largely North Vietnamese units from border regions outside South Vietnam: on Quang Tri from North Vietnam, on Kontum from Lacs and on Binh Long from Cambodia.

There are some other signs of the people's support for the fight against the North Vietnamese, but U.S. and South Vietnamese officials say they are not sure how deep they run.

In Hué, for example, the ancient imperial capital 50 miles south of the huffer zone and a traditionally anti-government center, the opposition Buddhists and leftwing university students have joined with Roman Catholics and government workers in a volunteer effort to aid the refugees flowing down from Quang Tri.

'The Question Is'

"There really is no precedent for this sort of thing but it does create en opportunity for the Saigon government," a U.S. ad-viser in Hue said. "The question is, Will the government be able to do anything about it?"

In an apparent effort to make use of the current anti-North Vietnamese feeling, the official Vletnam Press Daily Bulletin announced the formation of a "front support movement" to raise money, food and clothing for the refugees and wounded soldiers.

The South Vietnamese Army's response to the atlacks has varled from unit to unit. The Third Infantry Division, which was stationed at artillery bases just below the Demilitiraized Zone, abandoned them during the first enemy attacks and hehaved very hadly according to refugees, government officers and U.S. advisers on the spot.

"Let's face it, the Third Divislon was routed," a U.S. officer in Dong Ha said, "It was nothing hut a mad rush to the rear once the North Vletnamese started shelling them. Thousands of them came running through here those first days as fast as But, the officer continued, the hattalion of South Vletnamese marines and the squadron of tanks that were rushed up to Dong Ha held the town and stopped the North Vletnamese despite the heaviest enemy bomhardment of the war. Almost every huilding in the town bears scars of the enemy barrages.

The South Vletnamese tanks, American M-48s, were turned ov'r to the government troops late last year and the tank squadron was still undergoing Iraining when it got a call to rush to Dong Ha.

"They were magnificent," said an American adviser who was wounded in the fighting here. They knocked out six enemy tanks coming down the road and we could hear on the North Vielnamese tanks' radios that they were screaming about us. They hadn't expected us to be there." The South Vletnamese Air Force has also performed bravely, according to soldiers at the front, despite taking heavy losses from intensive enemy antiaircraft fire and surface-to-air dustry for efficiency. Remember

But in Vietnam his room for manipulation and management is smaller and his mandate less clear. As his associates privately concede, the remoteness of the enemy, the weariness of the American people and (ironically) the momentum of his own disengagement policies have conspired to limit his maneuverability. Not surpisingly, therefore, the Washington Special Action Group-Henry Kiasinger's WASAG-deliberated last week not about extreme possibilities but about ways of preserving Vietnamization by the tools left to preserve it-namely, American airpower-and the debate re-

WASHINGTON (NYT). — Until purchase of increments of time heen the most natural thing in the world for President Nixon to go to Fort Camphell, Ky., Thursday to welcome home the 101st Airborne Division and to thank them for staying the course in Vietnam while he gradually turned the fighting over to the South

But Mr. Nixon found himself in Philadelphia addressing Roman Catholic educators and one of the reasons for the change in schedule was the conclusion by the White House that a testimonial to the effectiveness of the Vietnamization program might now seem oddly inappropriate, The North Vietnamese attacks

But the enemy assaults have changed all that, reminding the confident prognosticators how fragile some of Mr. Nixon's strategies really are and how heavily he depends for aurvival on forces that, in varying degrees, lle out-side his control.

Majesty of Office

Much has been written since the Johnson era about the majesty of the Presidency, its capacity to exist in splendid isolation while controlling not only the policy-making process but the media as well. But as of now Mr. Nixon could probably write vol-umes on its limitations.

Despite a two-year effort to 'signal" the courts and the country that he opposed school husing, for example, he could not prevent district judges in Denver, In-dianapolis, Richmond and Detroit from ordering widespread transportation to end desegregation.

Despite a devaluation of the dollar and the imposition of wage and price controls, he found that he could not singlehandedly stem the tides of international economics or change the rhythm of supply and demand for cattle and

And despite a long lull in the fighting, dramatically diminished casualties and frequent public declarations that Vletnamization would succeed, he found he could not control the wishes of the political leaders and military strategists of North Vietnam.

In strictly political terms, however, the new round of fighting Vietnam presents him with a different and more delicate challenge than the crises at home. It cannot, his advisers concede, be finessed.

Confronted with court necisions mandating busing, Mr. Nixon could and did propose legislation to stop it, establishing thereby a visible and saleable position on the issue. Faced with rising food prices, he may still impose sanctions on the farmers, and, while this would anger the farmers, it would probably command the sympathy of housewives.

Early last week the State Department asserted that the North Vletnamese offensive would not have been possible without the Soviet artillery, tanks and missiles.

The stern tone of Mr. Laird's comments about the Russians led to increased speculation in Washington over the prospects for Mr. Nixon's trip to Moscow, due to hegin on May 22, but both Mr. Ziegler and Mr. McCloskey, in separate news conferences, said that plans for the visit were proceeding.

Administration officials said privately that Mr. Nixon was counting on a "historic agreement" on limiting strategic arms to emerge from the Moscow trip as well as expecting important progress in expanding trade and cooperation in other fields.

Officials felt that Vietnam would not be a productive subject for the Moscow meeting, since discussions between the two countrles have never succeeded in getting either side to agree to limiting aid to its Vietnamese

Alger Hiss 4 Decades Later—Serene and Philosophical

By Robert J. Donovan

"Rexford Tugwell, one of tha original New Dealers, said, We and near collapse, which was true will roll up our sleeves and make then, too. Also, the younger genoriginal New Dealers, said, We America over.' That really expressed the moral commitment we felt."

So said Alger Hiss the other day in reminiscing about the time 39 years ago when he and many other bright young lawyers went to Washington to work for Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal.

Mr. Hiss's Ill-starred career embraced the entire Roosevelt period, and he is writing a book about the New Deal, which will be published by Harper and Row. Having an active interest in the period myself, I called Mr. Hiss and asked if he would talk with me about the themes of his book. The 67-year-old salesman for Davison-Bluth, printers, suggested we have lunch nearly at a small Italian restaurant in Greenwich Village.

Serene Appearance

Despite the abrasions of the perjury case, in which he was convicted for falsely denying that he had passed secret government documents to the late Whittaker Chambers for delivery to a Soviet agent, and despite his three years and eight months in prison, Mr. Hiss appeared serene and in good health.

Though somewhat thinner, more angular and partly bald, he re-tains a trace of boyishness in a smooth face with high cheekbones and deep-set gray-blue eyes. "I am trying," he said about the book, "to describe what young people of my age went through in the New Deal as a way of saving the country. Pension Fight

Because of his conviction, he had been denied a government pension, but recently a federal court held that he is entitled to it. If not aet aside by the Supreme Court, the ruling wift enable Mr. Hiss to collect about $5,000 in back pensions and a monthly annuity of $80.

He works as a printing salesman "to keep hody and soul together, or"--he smiled--"as Dorothy Parker once said, to keep body and soul apart." also writes books and lectures in the United States and Europe. What did the New Deal accomplish? The question seemed to astonish Mr. Hiss. Why, the entire welfare state," he said, "Social Security hasn't improved much since. The agricultural program is almost identical with what we set up. though when I read about the payments to Sen. [James O.]

Rastland it is clear that some of it is too excessive. It should be scaled down according to the need.

Welfare Structure

"The New Deal set up the entire welfare structure, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the whole concept of federal relief. Lyndon Johnson, as an old Dealer, extended the New Deal when he became President. He was almost a Daniel-come-tojudgment. If it were not for Vietnam. I think he would have extended it still further.

"All of us in the New Deal had deep aense of American history. We saw it as a pendulum swinging between the Populist urge and the concentration of husiness operations. One of our hibles was "The American Corporation, by Adolf A. Berle and Gardiner Means, Berle, by the way, graduated from Harvard at 16. That is a terrible thing to happen to anybody. The hook demonstrated the concentration of business in America in terms of gross size. It held that the 500 top corporations controlled the hulk of American resources."

Mr. Hiss conceded that hy the late thirties the New Deal had not solved the unemployment problem, but rather had the problem taken off its hands by the war. But he was sure that a way would have been found out of the economic dilemna.

Something Greater

"What the New Deal dld do was something even greater. which was not our original objective because we were oriented to the pressing domestic problems," he said. That something greater was that, through the New Deal, America was redirected for the role it played in defeating Nazism.

"We achieved lahor unity and solidarity. We achieved the retoo late if it had not been lor the American 'arsenal of democracy'. Many of the ideals of the New Deal found expression in the Atlantic Charter and the Charter of the United Nations.

"Roosevelt, without changing strides, moved from the role of a great domestic leader to a great world leader. It was only because of the principles and policies that he espoused." Postwar Expansionism Because, Mr. Hiss said, of the postwar expansionism fostered by U.S. industry and the U.S. military, he doubted that Mr. Roosevelt could have stopped the cold war. But Mr. Hiss helieves

McCarthy era. "I see the McCarthy era," he said, 'as primarily a counterattack against the New Deal and New Deal ideology, Being Identified with hoth the New Deal and the United Nations, which had come under my province in the State Department, I was a

he would have moderated it as well as the excesses of the fair target." When the luncheon check came, I thought I should pay it, but Mr. Hiss insisted we divide it. "That is a principle I have followed scrupulously since the New Deal," he explained. "When I was in Washington the rule was thet when government officials were taken to lunch the hill was to be pald 50-50." C Los Angeles Times

Wall Street's Surge Is Good News to Nixon, But Voters Show Unease Over the Economy

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, April 9 (NYT).-Several dramatic developments in the political and economic worlds last week must have struck chords of interest, concern and satisfaction with administration advisers as they contemplated their strategy for this year's presidential

One development was the out-come of the Democratic primary in Wisconsin, which political pbservers say was a clear reflection of the electorate's disenchantment with the current handling in Washington of certain economic problems. Without question, this must have been instructive to the Nixon camp. Another highlight of the week was the resumed surge of the stock market—after its month of indecision. Many security analysts traced this rise to the improving tenor of various business, economic and international news. The administration could take comfort from the market's resurgence and the underlying reasons as a vindication of its con-tention that the economy will continue to gain and provide the climate it wants this fail.

Meanwhile, two major reports issued et the end of the week provided mixed, but mildly encouraging, lines on the economic

The unemployment rate swung npward again in March to 5.9 percent from 5.7, but the number of workers rose by 620,000 last month, the largest one-month gain since June, 1967. At the same time, the rise in the overall index of wholesale prices slowed markedly last month, gaining only 0.1 percent percent bulge. However, the important industrial commodities wholesale price index slowed its rise only to 0.3 percent from 0.4 percent in both January and February. The powerful upward thrust of after February's worrisome 0.9 the market in vigorous trading propelled it to strong gains for the week in the leading stock averages, with some of the indicators reaching new peaks. The Dow-Jones index was up almost 22 points to its top level in 35 months

NEW YORK, April 9.-Increased investor optimism over the economy helped send most prices higher last week on the American Stock Exchange and in the Over-the-Counter market in stepped-

Prices in both markets finished mixed on Monday and then scored three sessions of consecutive advances. However, the gains were trimmed on Friday as prices declined.

The Friday decline was triggered by news from the Labor Department that the nation's unemployment rate rose to 5.9 percent in March from 5.7 percent in February. Most brokers said that the market took in stride the latest eruption of fighting in

The improved tone of the market was reflected in the exchange's price index which finished on Friday at 28.31, up 0.44 points from

Turnover on the Amex climbed to 30,169,470 shares from 15,-176,210 shares the previous week, which only had four trading days because of the Good Priday holiday. A total of 83 blocks of 10,000 shares or more changed hands last week compared with 51 blocks the previous week.

The big gainer on the Amex was Tokhelm, which soared 21 1/8 points to 59 1/6. The company announced last week a 100 percent stock dividend and raised its cash dividend. The most actively traded stock was Teleprompter, which tacked on 2 5/8 to 36 1/2 formance was to administration sources, it was probably obscured by the strong showing of Sen. George McGovern of South Dakots. and Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama in Wisconsin, as well as by the rather heavy Republican cross-over vote in that Democratic primary.

The results were viewed hy many political soothsayers as confirmation of their contention that economic issues will be the paramount factor in next November's voting and that there is a strong element of discontent and protest on the subject that Republican strategists will have to take into account. The stock market registered a powerful advance last week, with advances outnumbering declines by B 2-to-1 ratio and all the leading averages up sharply, in ac-celerated trading. There were 1,169 issues on the New York Stock Exchange that closed higher for the week, against 589 that ended lower and 176 that showed no net change.

The market averages posted their best gains in four months. The Dow Jones industrial stock average jumped 21.90 points to 962.60, its highest level since May 16, 1969, when it reached 967.30. The New York Times combined average of 50 stocks rose 18.59 to 631.16; the Standard and Poor's 500-stock index climbed 2.42 to 109.62, a new high, and the Stock

JUMPS AHEAD-Mrs. Lloyd Thomas stands with Well to Do, the horse she bred and which, Saturday, won the Grand National Steeplechase.

Well to Do Presents Owner With Gift-Grand National

By Mike Katz

AINTREE, England, April 9 (NYT). — Tim Forster almost looked his gift horse in the mouth and almost didn't win the $102,102 Grand National Steeplechase yesterday.

The owner and trainer of Well to Do was not going to enter his 9-year-old gelding in the 128th running of the world's most fa-mous steeplechase. But on the for entries, the son of Phebus finished third in a four-mile steeplechase at Cheltenham. Forster telegraphed his acceptance only minutes before the deadline. The cost of the telegram was defrayed yesterday by Weil to Do's winning purse of $66,990. Ridden by 23-year-old champion National Hunt jockey, Graham Thorner, Well to Do de-feated the 1970 Grand National winner, Gay Trip, by two lengths in a driving rain, Thorner said, "The horse helped me a lot."

Well to Do, who Friday was 33-1 in the betting, was co-third choice of 14-1 after being touted by many English newspapers. His good form on off tracks and the fact that he has never fallen may also have accounted for the late

There was a deadheat for third place, three lengths behind Gay between two Irish horses, Bizek Secret and General Sy-mons. Cameres are against Aintree tradition and the judges refused to separate the horses, although it appeared that Black Secret, a 14-1 shot who was second last year to Specify was slightly in front of the 40-1 General Symons.

Specify, sent off at 22-1 since nobody has won the Grand National two straight years since Reynolds Town in 1935 and 1926, was fifth, followed by the 25-1 Astbury, who was third last year. Only nine of the 43 starters finished the four miles and 856 yards over 30 obstacles, L'Escargot, a 9-year-old Irish gelding owned by Raymond Guest, former United States ambassador to Ireland, was the 10-1 favorite because he was the class of the race, having won two Cheltenham Gold Cups. His trainer, Danny Moore, has had no luck with favorites in the Grand National Twice before he has saddled the people's choice and twice before they went down on the first jump.

This time, L'Escargot lasted until the third, when he fell when interferred with by the pack of wild horses. Well To Do was inherited by Forster from the estate of the late Mrs. Heather Sumner, for whom he trained. Mrs. Sumner, who had purchased the horse as a 8-year-old for $1,800 on Forster's advice, left the choice of one of five horses to the trainer in her will. He picked the winner

Celtics Take Lead in Playoff As Subs Dominate Hawks

The slam prospects looked good to South when his pertner raised to four spades over West's two-diamond overcall. It seemed unlikely that North held any diamond strength, so the hands could be expected to fit well. South therefore used Blackwood and bid the slam.

West led the heart six against six spades, and South was slightly disappointed when he saw the dummy. The heart queen instead of the diamond queen would have made the slam a certainty.

If West held the heart queen, the slam could be made without difficulty, but his lead made it almost certain that East held

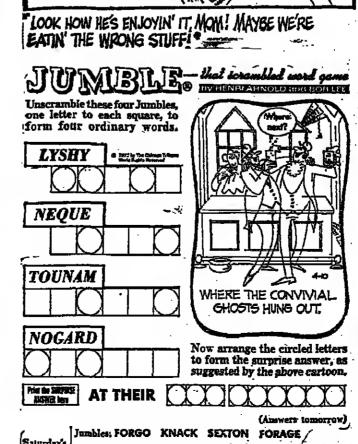

In this case West must have the spade ace and the minor-suit kings to justify his vulnerable overcall at the two-level.

SOUTH TO A VERY OLD PLACE

By Albert Murray. McGraw-Hill. 230 pp. $7.95.

UNTIL about a year ago, I used to ride the New Haven every afternoon from New York to Westport, and often, especially in the summer months, the train would stop for inscrutable reasons in one or another part of Harlem. At these times, while the other passengers pored over their newspapers or magazines, I would gaze out of the window and wonder whether we weren't being invited to inspect, at close hand, before going on to our lawns and swimming pools, the squalor of the tenements on either side of the tracks. But theo, when I looked down into the streets, it struck me that the picture was altogether different. There an almost carnival spirit reigned. Children ran, played ball, screamed with laugh-ter, gasped with pleasure under an opened fire hydrant. Adults stood about in small, close-knit groups, and I could plainly make out, even through the dirty window, the stylish gestures of the raconteur, sketching out his story.

It always seemed to me, remote in my win-dow with the dirt like an editorial scrawled across it, that those peoa city where nobody else was.

It is feelings like these that have made me two or three months late with this review of Albert Murray's "South to a Very Old Place." I hesitated because I mistrusted my sentiments: I wondered whether they weren't oversimplifications, the easy rationalizations of someone who didn't wish to face unpleasant truths. But it wasn't just the streets in Harlem: The evidence was all around me. I'd heard Northerner Norman Mailer on TV talking, not so much like a Sootherner, but like a black-and Marion Brando too, even when the part didn't call for an accent. I've heard ten thousand hairy kids in New York and other places talking black, even trying to strut—to walk and move black. I've watched them trying to think black, act black, be black, as if they felt that they had been de-prived of some "primal" ex-hat I saw. He's saying that the majority of blacks have some-thing most whites who write about them don't seem to have noticed. They have an instinctive sense of self and place that no amount of sociological double talk can change. The most concrete people in the world, they are the victims of a diarrhea of abstractions. You'd have to turn from the editorial to the sports page of your paper to see what Mr. Murray means, to read about the style elegance and mother wit of Willie Mays or Walt Frazier. You'd have to switch from Channel 13, from the full interest of a black poer who sounds as if he or she were born yesterday, to Channel 9, where you would see Walt take his world in his hands and toes it gracefully through the hoop or watch Willie belt his over the

Mr. Murray resents the white assumption that the Negro this word) was so simple or ignorant until he was "enlightened"—that he didn't know he was miserable If I'm so iniserable, how come you're always imitating me? would be his answer. If he agrees with black militants that white liberals don't understand him, that's about the only time he sees eye to eye with them. Because he would say that black militants don't understand him either. For the last 10 years, he's had the dubious privilege of listening to them tell him how he feels—based on nothing they ever saw for them. selves, but something they read in a book

To test his theory in the only way that means anything Mr. Murray took it to the people. He went on the road with it, went back to Mobile, Ale., where he was born; to Tuskegee, where he studied; to Memphis; to New Or. leans; to Atlanta and to Greens-boro, N.C. He talked to the his torian C. Vann Woodward, to the novelists Robert Penn Warren and Walker Percy, to editors of Southern newspacers such as Edwin Yoder—but most important of all he talked to folks, down home folks. He traveled back into himself too, where he heard the "slow-dragging circus-tiger vi-brato trombones," the creamy contraito warmth of the Southern mammy, and felt the crazy mix-ed-up "mulatto" quality of Amer-ican life—the kinship behind the "aginship." Taking Duke Ellington for his model, he has turned out a riffing, np-tempo stomp of a book. In "South to a Very Old Place," new insights streak like horns through a solid pulsing of home truths. As Kenneth Burke, one of Mr. Murray's white mentors, said: The symbolic act is the dancing of an attitude. The Negro's true symbolism is not to be found in the black militants or the white sociologists, but in the blues, in the funky and improbable affirmations of Lester Young, in the mammy-crooning of Johnny Hodges, in Louis Armstrong's Now here's Albert Murray, triumphant "laments," in Duke's who's been black for 55 years, formulating what I felt, confirming of "Be yourself, baby, Be dark and deep." Until you can feel this best, Mr. Murray says, don't cintter up the floor. Stand back and watch, Listen and learn. It's his Amen corner, not yours.

A Report by Wills

The Dodgers vote to begin play was taken at a meeting of players Thursday and was reported to news media by Maury Wills, the Dodger shortstop.

However, when Wes Parker, the Dodger player representative, neard about the vote on the radio, he rushed to a hotel where 20 Dodgers were holding another meeting.

In a later statement, he said the players, in reality, had voted to play only on the two conditions that negotiations would continue and that if they didn't produce a settlement, the issue would be submitted to arbitration.

In other words, in releasing the information to the media, Wills failed to include the proviso about arbitration. "We still back the Players Association 100 percent," said Parker who, interestingly, was the player representative who abstatued from the voting in the meeting last Friday in Dallas that resulted in

There was no explanation from Wills as to why he falled to mention the arbitration condition originally.

There was, however, gleeful comment from Peter O'Malley, tha Dodger president, on the first report, before Parker's ciarification. "All of us in the Dodger organization," O'Malley said, 'ara very pleased with our team's intelligent approach to the situation. I wish that all teams felt the same way."

THE END-Bob Foster has just connected with the chin of Vincente Rondon, who goes down for the count in the second round in their world light-heavyweight title bont in Miami Beach Saturday night.

Foster Quickly Settles Light-Heavy Dispute

By Dave Anderson

-With a left-right-left combination that paralyzed Vicente Rondon for more than a minnte, Bob Foster registered a secondround knockout Friday night that made two controversies academic -the world light-heavyweight boxing title and the Venezuelan boxer's weight.

Foster, of Albuquerque, N.M., emerged as the undisputed champlon at 2 minutes 55 seconds of the second round with Rondon on his face, his legs crossed behind him, his white shoes twitching.

After a cautious opening round, Poster floored Rondon, who had been recognized as the titleholder by the World Boxing Association, with a left hook. Rondon arose quickly at three, but took the mandatory eight count. After a brief clinch, Rondon annoyed Foster by hitting on the break.

Foster shook his head, as if warning Rondon, then chased him against the ropes and connected with a left hook, a crushing right hand and another left hook. Rondon sprawled onto his chest and never moved as the referee, Cy Gottirled, counted him out.

No Decision Needed "The right hand set him np for explained. "I didn't really want to knock him out. I wanted it to go 15, so I could beat him bad. I hate him and I hate the WBA, but I also knew that with a knockout I wouldn't have to worry about a decision." Rondon, who didn't throw more than half a dozen punches in the two rounds, appeared frightened by Foster's reputation as a knockout specialist. In his 47-5 won-lost record, the 33year-old Foster now has 40 knockouts.

Foster, recognized as the titleholder by the New York State Athletic Commission and the Boxing Council, has won 26 of his last 27 bouts, losing only to Joe Frazier, the world heavyweight champion, in a second-round knockout in 1970. He has never lost to a light-heavyweight.

Streak Stopped For Rondon, 26, the defeat was his sixth, and his first by a lightheavyweight, after 37 victories. His streak of consecutive triumphs ended at 22.

"I was worried when I saw his legs quivering," said Dr. Ferdinand Pachecho, who worked in Rondon's corner. "It reminded me of Ingemar Johansson when Floyd Patterson knocked him out here. But it doesn't seem necessary to take Rondon to a hospital. It was a clean knockout."

Foster's knockout victory, before a crowd of 6,131 that produced an estimated $70,000 gate at the Miami Beach Convention Hall, averted a continuation of the controversy over Rondon's

At the noontime ritual, Foster weighed 175 pounds, the division limit. Rondon, who had spent two hours in the Doral Country Club steam room, arrived half an hour later. His weight was an-nounced at 177, but the Miami Beach Boxing Commission of-ficials accepted it as 175 because of an alleged faulty scale.

"The scale was moved after Foster weighed in," said Murray Grossman, tha chairman of the commission, "but the managers have agreed to acceept Rondon's weight at 175." Lou Viscusi, who is Foster's

No other golfer in the field even broke par for 72 holes. Nicklaus's playing partner, Welskopf, with a final 74, and Crampton, of Australia, and Mitchell, from Viriginia, both with 73s, wound up in a tie for second at one-over-par 239 and got consolation prizes of $15,833 each.

Palmer, who had hoped that going to contact lenses would enable him, at 42, to regain his championship touch, fretted through a 9-over-par 61 today and wound up for back in the field at 12-over-par 300.

Another notable 300 shooter was U.S. Open and British Open champion Lee Trevino, who was over per in each of the first three rounds but finally equaled it today with his closing 72. Trevino had boycotted the previous two Masters on the grounds that "my game wasn't suited for the clongplaying: Augusta National Course," but had returned this year "determined to win now that I've made the necessary adjust-

In order to complete the first professional "grand slam" in one year, Nicklaus must now win the U.S. and British Opens and the he has won twice each before.

The golfing superstar said before the year started that he felt 1972 offered his best chance to win all four since "they are being

Czechoslovakia Tops Sweden In Title Hockey PRAGUE, April 9 (Reuters),-

Czechoslovakia overcame its first serlous hurdle in its bid for the gold medal in the "A" group world ice hockey championships by beating Sweden, 4-1, here

The Czechoslovaks scored 36 seconds after the first face-off, when Jaroslav Holik broke through the Swedish defense and passed to his brother Jiri, who got the goal.

Czechoslovakia has won both its games for four points, while the favored Soviet Union has won its only encounter.

Rupp Puts Off Politics Until 1974 Season

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 9 (AP).—Retiring University of Kentucky basketball coach Adolph Rupp, 70, now has indicated he may run for Congress in 1974.

The Kentucky coach of 42 years had said he would run for Congress this year if the Kentucky athletic board declined to waive the retirement regulation. After the board declined last Monday to set aside the rule, Rupp said he would not run for Congress this year because his family didn't want him to,

"I've got ao idea," said George McGovern, "We'll get Sam Yorly and Vance Hartke to run in the New Hampshire primary."

At this suggestion, everybody in the rocor broke up laughing. Be-tween wheezes, McGovern sald. "And they'll draw off enough votes to cut Ed's winning vote below 50 percent,

"Now you're talking, old buddy." George Wallace said. "When Ed's percentage goes below 50 percent, those pointyheads who write for the papers will say Ed is in trouble, and that will whip up some interest."

"Ed," Hubert Humphrey sald, "it would also create a lot of interest if you could cry in public just before election day." "And how about this?" I'd

"That's dumb, Ed. Really dumb," said George. "I'd whomp you something merciless in Florida, and then where would you be?"

"The papers would say my compaigo was faltering," Muskie cried. "The Democrats are really making a mess of it this time, everybody would say."

"That would be a mess, all right." O'Brien said. "A mess that we, as Democrats, could be proud of. But it could be even more of a mess, and even sillier, if we could get John Lindsay to run in Florida."

"John Lindsay!" Wallace howled with laughter. "I'd whomp him black and blua up in the alligator belt,"

"And for a capper," Hubert this time? By careful planning Humphrey suggested, "we could—the same way they did it last have Scoop Jackson come down and run, too,"

> Even the businesslike O'Brico needed help to stop guffawing at this idea. When calm had been restored, Eugene McCarthy said, "After Florida, there will be Illinois, and everybody will be saying Ed is through. I'll go up and Ed can rum against me in Illinois and..."

> "And beat you," McGovern sald, "so everybody will have to say that Ed's campaign is going great guns after all and there's no way of stopping him."

Nobody laughed at this. "The trouble with you, George Mc-Govern, is that your ideas are duil," said Sam Yorty, Vance Hartke and Scoop Jackson.

"Wait a minute," Larry O'Brien sald quietly, "George is onto something. Look: Ed beats Gene in Illinois, so everybody has to say he's unstoppable, right? Immediately afterwards, everybody goes to Wisconsin, and George beats Ed."

"Even better," said Muskie. "we'il also have Hubert run in Wisconsin, and I'll lose to him,

"Hey." cried Wallace, "for a real mess, how about if I go up to Wisconsin and beat Ed, too?" At this, everyhody leaned back and sighed. Eyes became round with wonder, "You know something?" Mayor Daley said, "that would really be a mess."

"Yeah," said Ted Kennedy, "but that's just the start. After Wisconsin, we'll go into Pennsylvania and Massachusetts and ...

Strolling Through Flemish Past

By Eleanor German

BRUSSELS (IHT).—Less than 80 kllometers from Brussels, in the Flemish countryside of the eastern Belgium province of Limburg, is an open-air museum of old Beigian farms and build-

There is a "Breughel" house, an old farm which has the ebaracteristic thatched roof loft seen in paintings of Peter Breughel the elder as well as other 16thceotury Flemish painters. Furnishings, too, evoke that time with pieces of the period and faithful re-creations of others. Village buildings are placed around a trianglesnaped grazing green with hedges and gardeos and a water pond such as Breugbel would have known.

A visit to this collection of objects of daily use of long ago brings the ordinary day-to-day past to life. These structures come from all over Flemish Belgium and were transplanted to the Domaine of Bokrijk to preserve some remnants of the life once lived by the Belgian people.

The museum, which is open from Easter through October, is part of the Bokrijk estate, whose 1,300 acres contain woods, animal preserves, rose-gardens and children's playgrounds plus four restaurants. These range from a dining room within a chateau in the domaioe to an old inn, St. Gummarus, which is also one of the exhibits in the open-air museum. The estate is on the road between the two towns of Hasselt and Genk.

'Living Record'

Director Jozef Weyns, who cooceived the idea of the outdoor museum several decades ago, says, "I visualized a living record of dally life. So people of today can see how things were in olden times when life was slower and 20th-century comfort was not yet even a dream."

And living, indeed, Bokrljk is. There's a sense of strolling through an unusually picturesque and beautiful countryside. Sheep graze in the meadows; roosters crow in the barnyards; hens cackle that their eggs are fresh laid: ducks swim in the ponds. Atteodants, dressed in the farmer's clothing of loose blue blouses, red scarves and wooden shoes, tend little gardens outside the farmhouses or alt drowsing before fires in the huge kitchen fireplaces. The houses contain such artifacts as thick earthenware bowls with a deep pourlog lip for holding milk and letting the cream rise, a large plyoting post for carrying a blg iron cauldron from the kitchen fire to the feeding troughs of the onimals and a wooden wheel for courning butter which was turoed by a dog. A narrow slanting board on the outside of the farmhouses often served as a staircase for chickens to go in and out of their peo Inside.

For washing up, in summer there was the well out of doors and in winter, the brick-paved end of the kitchen-living room where the women washed the dishes and dumped the Water on the floor which drained through a hole in the wall One house, with more sophisticated living quarters reserved for a landlord, has ao inside tollet, a wooden structure,hanging in the air on the side of the building with a barrel underneath. More common, however, was the sekreet, a corner which was usually found outside in the piesty. Bokrijk's open-air museum has a number of pigsiles, several of which are surprisingly handsome. For example, a pigsty from Helst-op-den-Berg, typical of the Flemish Kempenland, has the toilet in the middle with two circles cut in the seat; on each side are separate wings with quarters and feeding troughs for about four pigs.

The thousands of details in Bokrijk are poignant. There's a midwife's mat laid beside a fireplace to receive a newborn babe; coarse linen cloth is stretched taut to cover a glassiess window; the elay floors are swept smooth; the short beds in which people slept sitting up are often eurtained

Plants grow on the peak of some of the roofs. These are "house-leaks," a reminder of superstition that lightning would not strike a house bearing these plants, beloved by Thor, god of thunder, Structures range from the pigstles through the gamut of farm buildings plus windmills, watermills, a church dating back to the 10th century, a chapel to the 15th and a formal gentleman's house. In most instances, the date of origin and individual histories of the buildings are known.

More than half of the buildings wera docated by former owners, various town councils in Belgium and other organizatloos. Ooe barn, for example, was threatened by the expansion of the port of Antwerp and was carefully dismantled by the city and offered to the museum. A 17th-ceotury communal brewery was donated by a brewers association, a bakeshop given by an association of bakers and so on. Some huildings were purchas-ed at costs varying from 12,000 Belgian francs (around $250) for an old barn to a handsome, big. 600-year-old farmhouse for about 50,000 Belgian francs (more than $1,000).

Control for the control of the contr

Once such buildings are acquired, there is the task of moving them to the moseum site and then restoring them. Repairs or reconstruction are carried out as they would have been done at the time of the origin of the building. The buildings are measured, torn apart, then re-erected, stone by stone. Some 50 men work yearround, maintaining and restoring tha museum. Masons, carpenters, all the trades and their helpers, are busy here.

Roof Problem

When reconstruction of the buildings began in the early 1950s (the museum was opened to the public on April 12 1958), thatched roofs were a problem because thatchers who knew the old techniques were rare. Two elderly thatchers were finally found who could thatch in the old way, and they have since taught younger men their craft.

The open-air museum is still growing. There are frequent additions of buildings, presenting still more aspects of daily life in other days. There is room for expan-sion; despite all the buildings, Bokrijk is not crowded.

For connoisseurs, the constructions are divided into three Flemish regions, each with its own architectural details. If Breughel returned, he'd think that things haven't changed a bit.

Great Lie," but settled, as did the other winners of that austere era, for a plaque, with the understanding that it would later be replaced. In her antobiography "A Life on Film," Miss Astor revealed that she never had received her statuette and "would dearly love to have a real Oscar." Several days ago, officials of the Motion Picture Academy rectified the oversight and delivered the Oscar, 30 years late, to Miss Astor's home in North Los Angeles.

"It's been a little slow," says Maureen Reagan, "but I'm getting there." The daughter of actress Jane Wyman and Ronald Bragan, Governor of California, is finally speaking, singing and acting for herself. Maureen started bar career at the age of five in one of her mother's movies, but quite the game at six on advice of her father, who wanted her to "know how to read and write so I could sign my contracts." During her "retirement," Miss Reagan at-tended Marymount College in Arlington, Va., jined the secretary corps in Washington, married a Marine lieutenant and divorced him three years later, and stumped the State of California for her father ("I'm not as conservative as my father. Prewhat I call a militant moderate. don't believe in the weifare state but I support the Virtnamization plan." l. After some TV appearances and a USO: tour, Maureen has now bussomed into an actress, starring in a Dallas stage production of The Last of the Red-Hot Lovers." It's a fairly late start; Miss Reagan is 30 but rarely talks about it "because my parents have a trauma every time I tell my age. My mother still insists she's not a day over 40, which is just fine, because she looks that good."
